Musings

There is a South American proverb which claims that mañana is the word which the devil chooses to combat humankind's conscientious tendencies. If we have some good to do, some kind word to say, some injustice to highlight, let us do it today, for we are not guaranteed a tomorrow and, even if we were, the situations that we might have been instrumental in changing may well be beyond our control by then. When we are inspired to do good let's not hesitate, for we shall not pass this way again.
